SANJA BISTRIČ|Ć SRIĆA: MISLIM DA SE SJEĆAM / THINK I REMEMBER

svojem radu Mislim da se sjećam, kroz jezik eksperimentalnog dokumentarnog filma, autorica istražuje fragmentiranost sjećanja prikazanih u formi kratkih dnevničkih zapisa. Doživljaj sjećanja kao slike, koja ima svoj sadržaj i trajanje, konceptualno usmjerava rad u dekonstrukciju filmske forme na medije slike i zvuka. Prisjećanje i prebiranje po sjećanjima u umu, čiji je sadržaj vremenom nestalan i podložan distorzijama, zahtjeva strpljenje te kontinuiran kontemplativan proces kojeg autorica instiktivno provodi kroz istraživanje samog medija slike. Dokumentiranom intervencijom optičkim pomagalima na snimljenom materijalu ispituje se interpretativni kapacitet slike, dok se na formalnom planu otkrivaju nove izražajne mogućnosti. Ovisno o načinu kretanja konveksnih ili konkavnih ogledala, odnosno povećala raznih stupnjeva te kutu snimanja mijenja se percepcija izvorne slike koje sada u bljeskovima trepere, prelijevaju se, nestaju, opet naviru, gube oštrinu i blijede kao sjećanja. Odrazi fotografija i snimki u ogledalu ukazuju na dualnu prirodu zajedničku stvarnoj i mentalnoj slici u kojoj istovremeno postoje prošlost i sadašnjost, subjekt i objekt koji prisjećanjem iznova proživljava događaje te se kritički odnosi prema sebi pogledom u prošlost. Čovjekovo unutarnje, subjektivno vrijeme je isprekidano i fragmentirano u odnosno na normativno, kronološko vrijeme koje, kao i filmska slika, teče kontinuirano. Montažom snimljenog materijala manipulira se filmskim vremenom te ustanovljuje cjelina koja se opire objektivnom narativu evocirajući logiku psihološkog vremena. Svako novo prizivanje mentalne slike događaja, kao i opetovano snimanje prikupljenog materijala, iskrivljuje ili restrukturira zbilju čime se odbacuje ideja doslovne rekonstrukcije sjećanja te se poetično oživljavaju njihove utjelovljene emocije. Vizualnom reprezentacijom djelića prošlosti u formi dnevničkih zapisa nastavak je duge tradicije ženskog pisma u povijesti književnosti izraženo kroz me-dij eksperimentalnog filma. Stoga je jasna potreba za izražajnim moguénostima teksta koji precizno oblikuje nijanse značenja prikazanih slika čija je interpretacija znatno otvorenija. Audio kolaž zvukova atmosfere, instrumentalnih ili pjevušenih melodija stvara zvučni pejzaž koji u jedinstvenu cjelinu povezuje video fragmente, dok je intimna priroda rada naglašena autoričinim glasom u narativnim elementima kompozicije. Naš doživljaj sjećanja koji je često nalik snu konačno je reflektiran kroz ambijentalnu audiovizualnu instalaciju gdje u mraku galerije izranjanju nestalne slike, dok je sama metafotografska struktura rada koja počiva na refleksijama, procesualnosti i istraživanju medija izražena kroz postav.

n her work I Think I Remember, through the language of experimental documentary film, the author explores the fragmentation of memories presented in the form of short diary entries. The experience of memory as an image, with its content and duration, conceptually directs the work towards deconstructing film form into the media of image and sound. Recollection and rumination on memories in the mind, whose content is unstable over time and subject to distortions, require patience and a continuous contemplative process that the author instinctively conducts through the exploration of the medium of visual representation. Through documented intervention using optical aids on recorded material, the interpretive capacity of the image is examined, revealing new expressive possibilities on a formal level. Depending on the movement of convex or concave mirrors, or the magnification of various degrees and angles of shooting, the perception of the original images changes, now flickering, overflowing, disappearing, emerging again, losing sharpness, and fading like memories. Reflections of photographs and footage in the mirror point to a dual nature common to the actual and mental image: past and present, subject and object coexist. Through recollection, events are relived and critically examined by looking into the past. Human internal, subjective time is interrupted and fragmented, contrasting with the normative, chronological time that flows continuously like the film image. Through the editing of recorded material, film time is manipulated, establishing a whole that resists objective narrative by evoking the logic of psychological time. Each new invocation of a mental image of an event, as well as the repeated recording of collected material, distorts or restructures reality, rejecting the idea of literal reconstruction of memory, and poetically reviving their embodied emotions. The visual representation of fragments of the past in the form of diary entries is a continuation of the long tradition of women's writing in the history of literature expressed through the medium of experimental film. Hence, there is a clear need for expressive possibilities of text that precisely shapes the nuances of meaning in the depicted images, whose interpretation is much more open. An audio collage of atmospheric sounds, instrumental or humming melodies, creates a sound landscape that integrates visual fragments into a unified whole. At the same time, Bistričić emphasizes the intimate nature of her work in the narrative elements of the composition. Our experience of memory, often resembling a dream, is finally reflected through an ambient audiovisual installation, where unstable images emerge in the darkness of the gallery, while the meta-photographic structure of the work, based on reflections, processability, and exploration of media, is expressed through its presentation.
